Meditation:

Where Is It?

by John L.

I am in the early stages of my recovery (again) and have tried many things except meditation (lately). I hear and read about it in every group meeting I go to, but rarely see it practiced. I want to try this new method in my recovery to see if it helps me stay clean.

I went to my first of two 30-day treatments when I was 20 and in the military. A big part of that treatment was guided imagery, biofeedback, and meditation. That was 34 years ago; I want to try to incorporate it into my present-day recovery, but it is difficult for me. I am distracted and need guidance on what to say, when to do it, who to do it with, etc. I don't want to wait until I reach the 11th Step to start meditation. I want a better way of life! I want to live!

I have read that praying is talking to my Higher Power, and meditation is listening for his answers. What questions do I ask? What kind of answers do I listen for? I am so sick of using — and the behaviors that come with using — and am desperate for a new way of life! Can practicing meditation help me stay stopped and grow in recovery?

I have noticed that some members find it unbearable when there is silence between sharing and seek to end it with double-dipping. I find this quiet time for reflecting on what I have heard at that meeting, and perhaps to listen for my Higher Power's voice.

I had no problem seeing that my life was unmanageable, but it has taken me some time to admit that I was powerless over my addiction.

One Foot In Front of the Other . . .

by Cassandra Q.

It's been about 196 days and my mind is still in a haze.
It's running so fast, around and around,
I'm tryin' to remember that this isn't a race.
It's more like a maze, but I've got a guide.
I'm so amazed that it stays by my side.
I know that it placed these things in my life.
I've got faith that it's gonna be alright.
It's been about six months and one week.
The obsession is not leaving me.
I just sit and pray and try to get through it.
I know what not to do, because I've done that and blew it.
Don't wanna do that again because I always get beat
I want to face Victory, not Defeat.

The Sounds of the City

by Blumeadows (song lyrics)

The sounds of the city, do I even care
Loud sirens and engines invade my air
Disco blasting from a passing car
Punk rock coming from a smoky-lit bar
Then I look up in the sky and just what I see
A noisy iron bird flying over me
The sounds of the city
The sounds of the city can also be a fright
Gun shots fill up the blackened night
A man gets shot; Dope deal gone bad
Blames his addiction on his drunkard dad
Now he is on the warpath, throughout day and night
Looking for someone to pick a fight
Well, he met his match and he is lying in a grave
Another addict gone, that we might have saved.

We need your ideas, talent and input!

The Seattle Area Newsletter needs your touch!

It can be a personal story of how you, the Fellowship, or your Higher Power helped to get you through a tough time; your views on a particular quote from the NA literature that you happen to like; or a simple expression of gratitude.

You do not have to be a professional writer, and please don't worry if you think you can't write well enough — we will be happy to make any spelling or punctuation corrections for you. The important thing is that you will be sharing your recovery with other addicts. After all, we can only keep what we have by giving it away.

The length of your article isn't important, either. The only real criteria for submissions is that they reflect the message of Narcotics Anonymous and stick to the identification of ourselves as addicts suffering from the disease of addiction.

Email submissions to newsletter@seattlena.org. Thank you for your time, support and for getting involved. Hugs and luvs!
